

Homebrewing

Day of Dungeons 2026

Nicholas Cornia, Orpheus Instituut

Disclaimer

The games that are cited in the following essay are part of the personal repertoire of the author, built from reading, studying, playing and homebrewing.

The act of homebrewing is a peculiar characteristic of our hobby, let's try to make some sense out of all of it, shall we?

Powered by Knights of Last Call

YouTube channel

Why homebrewing?

A huge part of what makes childhood play so wholehearted is playing with the rules, not just by them.

the rules, which often seem set in stone, suddenly become material for playful exploration through design.

The Stuff Games are Made Of, Pippin Barr

Why homebrewing?

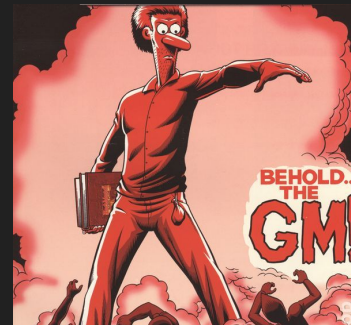

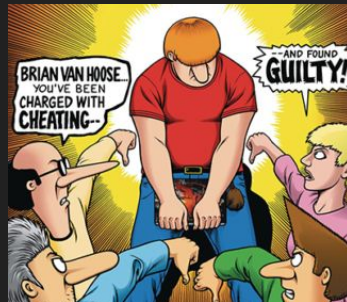

- Introduce homebrew rules progressively
- Be transparent to fellow players
- Motivate your choices
- Don't forget that your TTRP has been extensively playtested

Aspects of Play

The back-and-forward interaction between the game-mechanics and the shared fantasy – or the fiction – is responsible for the emergence of a rich playing space.

- Player Characters
- Players
- Game Masters

Player Characters

We would be tempted to assume that player characters, or PCs, and their actual players should share the same drives and motivations... but that's not the case!

- Character Creation
- Attributes and Talents
- Relations and Drives
- Helping and Teamwork
- Progression and Rewards
- Dealing with Death

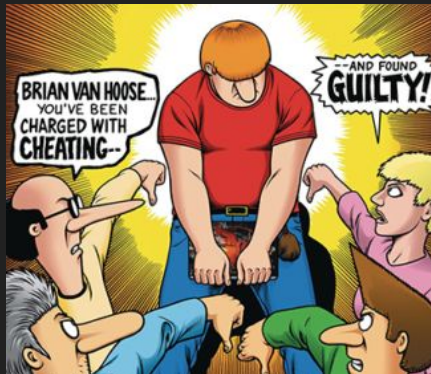

Players

Games are the art form about choices and consequences.

The Beauty of Games, Frank Lantz

- Conflict Resolution
- Resource Management
- Metacurrency
- Narrative Agency and Worldbuilding

Game Masters

Portray a fantastic world, fill the characters' lives with adventure, play to find out what happens.

Dungeon World, GM principles

- Degrees of Success
- Fronts and Oppositions
- Oracles and Tables
- Time Management and Procedural Play

Resources

Have a look at the official documentation of this workshop:

Q & A

